

A Blushbuild Freebie

Pretty & Unforgettable Brand Starter Kit

Everything you need to open your shop with quiet confidence.

This kit is the exact playbook I wish someone had handed me the week I opened my first shop. No fluff, no 'manifest your first sale' pep talk — just the setup steps, the templates, and the small pricing decisions that keep new sellers stuck for months. Work through it in one afternoon and you'll have a shop that's ready for its first listing by the end of the day.

1. Naming your shop without over-thinking

Your shop name is not a tattoo. It is a URL slug and a header graphic. Pick something you can spell out loud, that's under 14 characters, and that doesn't box you into one niche. If you sell wedding printables today but might sell birthday printables next year, don't put 'wedding' in the name.

A safe pattern that works: [word that feels like you] + [word that feels like your craft]. Blushbuild. Softserve. Slowmark. Read it out loud. If it makes you cringe, try again. If it makes you shrug, ship it.

2. Sections that actually help discovery

- Best sellers — always first, even if you only have one item in there
- New — signals to buyers and to the algorithm that the shop is alive
- By use case (weddings, birthdays, launches) — not by file type
- Bundles — highest-margin section, put it third from the top
- On sale — only if you actually run sales

3. The first-listing template

Title formula: [Main Keyword] | [Secondary Keyword] | [Format] | [Style Descriptor]. Example: 'Wedding Seating Chart Template | Editable Canva | Printable PDF | Minimalist'.

Description structure: one-line hook, three bullet points on what's included, three bullet points on how to use it, one paragraph on the vibe / who it's for, then FAQ and terms. Keep the hook above the fold — marketplace listings truncate fast on mobile.

- 5 mockup images (cover, in-context, close-up, dimensions, before/after)
- 1 video (Canva 10-second walkthrough is enough)
- 13 tags, all lowercase, none duplicating your title exactly
- Digital delivery via your shop platform — never DM the file

4. Beginner pricing worksheet

Digital products get priced on perceived value, not effort. A worksheet that took you three hours can be $12 if it saves someone six hours. Start by writing down: what does the buyer stop doing / stop feeling once they use this?

A simple ladder that keeps a new shop healthy: one freebie ($0), one starter product ($9), one main product ($19-$29), one bundle ($47-$67). Don't launch with the bundle. Launch with the starter, then stack.

5. The first-week promo plan

- Day 1: 3 Pinterest pins for your first listing, each with a different hook
- Day 2: post the listing to your Instagram story with a 'first day open!' sticker
- Day 3: DM 5 friends the direct link, ask for one honest reaction, not a purchase
- Day 4: 3 more pins with new mockups
- Day 5: add a second listing (never let the shop sit at one)
- Day 6: rest — the algorithm needs a beat
- Day 7: review analytics, kill the pin with the worst CTR, double down on the best

6. Opening messages I send to first buyers

'Hi [name] — thanks so much for being one of my very first buyers, that genuinely made my week. Your file is attached to the order page but I'm dropping it here too just in case. If anything's off, message me directly — I'll fix it same day. — [You]'

Follow-up 5 days later: 'Hi again! Just checking the file worked ok. If you have a second and it was helpful, a review would mean a lot. If it wasn't, tell me why — I'll rework it.'

Opening a shop is 90% just publishing the first listing. The rest is iteration. Come back to this PDF at the end of month one and tick off what you actually did — you'll be further along than you think.
